In the center of the gravel walk leading from the iron gate to the State House is an iron fountain, pair and made at the same proportional whose sparkling waters send forth a low, murmuring sound.

East of the State House, looking North, is the right wing which contains Governor's and other State offices. Gen. Hill informed me that his office which is now in a dilapidated condition was soon to be taken down to make room for the left wing which is soon to be erected. The State has other buildings which are interesting to those visiting the capital, among which are the East side of the cemetery, and while writing in the cemetery I could hear the inmates during recess playing in the only point at which there had then the yard like little children. The Colored Normal School stands on the hill about half way between the cemetery and Fort hill. It is a new brick build:
